"Second Shepherd's Play" Admired By Freshmen

English Department Stages Fifteenth Century Miracle Play
As Opening Production Of Season — Freshman
Audience Nervous — Play To Be Repeated Tonight
For General Public

By R. N. R.

LAST NIGHT the curtain at Moyses Hall went up on the English Department's first production in the 1936-37 series. The "Second Shepherd's Play" is a late miracle of fifteenth century England full of robust hearty characterization, but, unfortunately, handicapped on the modern stage by its very antiquity. One of the prerequisites of a successful play is an audience inclined to be pleased. Yet it seems to be the fate of all Medieval drama to be received by an audience cold, nervous, and embarrassed, stoically determined to pursue education at any cost. The fact that the play was enjoyed at all is a credit to someone or other. The manner in which last night's audience, composed chiefly of Freshmen, rose to the occasion sets an example for all other underprivileged classes.

Such a play is a critic's joy. For once he is excused from the disagreeable task of poking about the viscera of public taste to discover some opinion that will meet with the approval of, if you wish, the disapproval of all and sundry. Here at last he can give full rein to that heavy load of knowledge that bows the shoulders of any genuine highbrow critic. Here he can really talk down to his readers, and such as you can never know that joy of labour rewarded.

Mak, Sheep-stealer

The play actually amounts to very little dramatically. It is the tale of Mak, the sly sheep-stealer, who almost pulls the wool over the eyes of three shepherds. However, when he fails to convince them that the stolen lamb is his wife's new-born boy, he receives a good tossing at the hands of the shepherds, and the public sense of justice is satisfied. But the audience isn't allowed to call it a night, and is promptly informed that the play must be finished off on the proper evangelic notes. With song and music the Heavenly Host appears to announce the Nativity, and the three shepherds in a humble allegory of the three wise men, present their gifts—a branch of cherry, a doll, and a ball for the tennis. This dual nature of the play moves our attention to its historical background.

Guild Cycles

The folk-plays of Anglo-Saxon England have no relation to the classical drama of Rome. It is rather peculiar that the Church which discouraged the classic play, eventually fostered the folk-play. The latter developed slowly out of the liturgical play of religious festivals. The expanding costs and audience necessitated a shift of the responsibility from clerical to secular hands. The religious significance was not lost, although the emphasis now rests more and more upon the entertainment value of the performance. At this stage the cycles of plays were presented, with paid actors supported by the guild, in the form of a pageant. As in the current production, there was no change of scene, the action simply being transferred to a different part of the stage. From the miracle the growth was swift toward the splendour of the Elizabethan Theatre.

In spite of all our mud-slinging, we must confess a frank astonishment at the purity of the characterization, the aptness of dialogue, and the skillful suspense with which the unknown author of this play closed his simple plot.

Deb Dance Vs. Junior Prom

DESPITE the opposition offered by somebody or other's coming-out dance, McGill will still be holding her one and only Junior Prom. For those of you who are going to this Deb dance, we suggest that afterwards, instead of going to the Aud per usual, you come to the Mount Royal Hotel where the entire Auditorium Band under Irving Loring will be in attendance. We also guarantee that our Prom will outlast any other affair, since the orchestra has been hired from 10 p.m. till at least 3 a.m., declared a member of the Prom Executive in a Daily interview.

Tickets are still available from the various faculty representatives, caretakers of the buildings, and Norman Cuke, freshman President.

Imitations, Songs Feature Banquet Given By R.V.C.

AN imitation of Ginger Rogers doing a tap dance by Mary Louise Crooks led the list of attractions at the Annual R.V.C. Buffet Supper last night. After supper was served Barbara Barker president of the Women's Union opened the programme by introducing the mistress of ceremonies Lorraine Strachan.

The first item of the programme was an old fashioned melodrama followed by a dance by Christine Ross. The Glee Club put on a skit and song entitled "One Fish Ball". R.V.C. '38 then gave those present a song composed by Helen Mc-Masters. Following this a poem "Englishmen are Different" was recited by the authoress Isabel Neuman. An imitation of Bob Burns and his Hazooka brought the entertainment to a close. The mistress of ceremonies then invited those present to join in McGill songs.

Players' Club To Discuss Activities In Union Today

Reports Will Serve As Index
Of Work Done

WITH but two weeks until the curtain goes up on McGill's dramatic highlight of the season, the Players' Club presentation of "Fly Away Home", a general meeting has been called for 5 o'clock in the Union Ballroom today. The main business to be taken up at the meeting will be the reports from the various production committees, which at present are working at top speed. Their reports will serve as an index of the amount accomplished to date, and whether or not certain phases of productions need bolstering.

Another important feature of the meeting will be the organization of the ticket selling committee, a vital point in assuring the success of the production. It is uncertain whether the director Mr. Wayne will be in attendance. If he is present, Mr. Wayne will outline the progress of the actual play itself and how the cast is shaping up. The executive points out that

McGill To Oppose Vermont Debaters

Upholding the negative side of the proposition "Resolved that the interests of civilization demand disarmament rather than armament" a McGill team composed of Allan Anderson and J. R. Burt will oppose students of the University of Vermont, Friday night at 8.15 in Strathcona Hall.

J. R. Burt, in 2nd year United Theological College, is well reputed in the debating field having been on the final team in the Interclass Debating League of Arts '35, and semi-finalist in the Talbot-Papineau Shield Contest for Public speaking. He also took an active part in the Herriot Watt Literary Society of Edinburgh, and the Quebec Y.M.C.A.

The other member of the team, Allan Anderson, is already known as an experienced debater having taken part in several previous debates.

Students Urged To Face War Danger In Effective Way

Study Series Of Peace Movement
Opened By Charles
Lapitsky

STUDY ESSENTIAL

Mr. Gibson Leads Group On
League, 5 P.M. Today,
Strathcona Hall

"THE object of the Student Peace Movement is to awaken student opinion to the danger of war and to give students such an understanding that they will react to this danger in the most effective way," stated Charles Lapitsky, member of Provincial Student Peace Council, opening the first Study Group of the S.P.M. last night in Strathcona Hall. This first group is to meet every Wednesday in the Committee Room at Strathcona Hall to discuss, under the leadership of Professor J. C. Hemmison of the Economics Department, the "causes of war".

Today, and every following Thursday a second group will discuss the relations of Canada and the League of Nations. The leader will be Mr. James Gibson, Montreal Secretary of the League of Nations Society, and Rhodes Scholar from British Columbia. Mr. Gibson has studied at Oxford and on the Continent. Recently he delivered an address at the Quebec Peace Conference.

A third group is now being formed to discuss Democracy, Education and Peace; this involves the effect of movies, churches, and especially colleges and high schools upon public opinion with regard to peace. The leader of this group, which will probably meet on Fridays, is to be Professor Southam. It will be noted that the Peace Movement Study Groups are being arranged upon a different plan from that of last year. Instead of single topics for each meeting, each group discusses given aspects of a wide topic which is continued for several sessions.

Furthermore, to avoid vagueness, and to supply the students with concrete facts on the topics assigned, outlines containing information and suggesting books and periodicals to read up, will be available at least two days before the meeting. Research committees of graduate students have been appointed to augment the supply of data on the various subjects.

With regard to practical activities, the Movement at McGill is endeavouring to form a branch at Macdonald College; and summary reports of the study group results will be exchanged with other universities. It has been suggested by students in other universities that practical measures should be taken to cause the erasure from the Canadian Statutes of the Conscription Laws of 1917, which still threaten conscription in case of war.

Il Duce A Stuffed Shirt, States Gordon

Compares Italy's Modern Caesar To Capone And Ziegfeld

"Mussolini's methods are those of a Chicago gangster," declared King Gordon in his address yesterday. The topic, "Sawdust Caesar and Other Stuffed Shirts," turned out to be an attack on Italy's modern Caesar.

According to the speaker, Mussolini is not, as is generally believed, a magnificent dominating personality but rather under-sized and actually insignificant.

Mussolini's chief characteristics are his vanity and ruthlessness in gaining his personal ends, intermingled with conceit. He is a combination of Al Capone and the Great Ziegfeld. His methods are gangsterish while he has glorified the Italian soldier as Ziegfeld glorified the American girl, asserted the speaker.

The speaker also expressed the belief that France's threat to bombard Barcelona may arouse England against Mussolini within a very short time. Also, Mussolini is attempting to civilize Ethiopia while slaves are still actually found in Tripoli.

King Gordon concluded his address with the assertion that Great Britain will probably be the first nation to call the bluff of this big bully.

General Secretary Of S.C.M. Speaks At McGill Sunday

BEVERLY Oaten General Secretary of the S.C.M. will take part in the chapel service held at Divinity Hall on Sunday at 7.30. He will give an address on "Open House" at Strathcona Hall. Mr. Oaten is a graduate of Victoria College, of the University of Toronto and has been General Secretary of the S. C. M. in Canada for about three years. He has had wide experience with students and in students activities in all parts of Canada.

During his stay here he will speak to a forum for graduates and graduate students, along with Dr. F. Howes and George K. Thorne on Dr. Fritz Kunkel, eminent German psychologist. Mr. Oaten will discuss the national student conference to be held in Winnipeg during December, 1937 and will address the proposed conference with a representative group of students to find out their opinion as to what should be done.

Economists Learn Recent Progress Of Trade Unions

Edmund Gordon And Jim
Morgan Will Speak
Tonight

"THE recent development of Trade Unionism" will form basis of a two-man symposium at the next meeting of the Political Economy Club tonight at 8.15 in the Smoking Room in the Arts Building. Edmund Gordon and Jim Morgan, both Honour Students in the Faculty of Economics, will deliver the two speeches on the recent trends in the organization of labour on a mass scale.

The split that seems to be evident within the ranks of the American Federation of Labour, the largest Trade Union in the United States, at the present time, and the opposition of the Committee for Industrial Organization to the A. F. of L. will provide a good deal of the discussion, which will however not confine itself solely to the present political organization, but which will deal in some measure with the economic basis for Trade Unionism, and with the opposition to it.

This program will be the second in a series of lectures to be delivered to the Political Economy Club by students who are at present enrolled in the department. Previously the meetings have been held at a later hour, but tonight the executive asks that attendance be punctual. The time is 8.15.

Cafeteria Specials Will End This Noon

Today is the last opportunity for you to take advantage of the current specials offered at the Union Cafeteria. That popular-priced meals are generally looked upon with favour is evidenced by the fact that in the past two days over four hundred and fifty lunches and dinners were served.

All prices are reduced. There is a full course dinner at thirty cents instead of the regular thirty-five, dinner without entree at twenty-five cents and a lighter lunch at twenty.

Enlarged Directory Welcome Blessing For Questing Males

JOE COLLEGE'S problem is solved. No more does he have to phone the girl he took out last night to find the telephone number of the girl he is going to take out tonight—he has a student directory! Bill Gentleman reports he has already sold literally hundreds of them, especially since for the first time they list all students at Macdonald College as well as those at McGill. (Somebody spent two hours counting the names listed, and there are exactly three thousand one hundred and eighty-nine). Only a dime instead of the former fifteen cents, they contain the name, course, address and telephone number of all and sundry at McGill. The only possible improvement would be a photograph and short description of each person.

The Smiths, of course, bloom forth in full prominence, completely overshadowing all other names with their towering total of thirty-three. The Jones, however, provide the upset of the season with a mere thirteen as compared with seventeen for Browns and sixteen for Campbells.

One durrp we know has already put his Directory to good use. At two-thirty this afternoon he decided to go to a formal tonight; he would not dare to ask any girl he knew on such short notice. What to do? Why, the Directory, of course! And after just thirteen phone calls his offer was finally accepted. And he didn't get any lemon, either.

So, if you ever want a strange woman for any reason, consult your Directory. Again, the Directory would make very fine reading some wet afternoon; and, with a little luck, you may even be able to light your fire with it. At any rate, no student can afford to be without a Directory!

McGill Hockeyists Draw With Canadiens Last Night

Play 4-4 Game And Take Two Point Lead Over Royals —
Crutchfield Leading McGill Point Gatherer—Quebec
Defeats Vics 5-0 — Therrier Scores Twice

By Pete Fuller

FAILING to hold a two goal margin after two and a half periods of play, Bobby Bell and his Red hockey team had to be content with a 4-4 tie against the much improved Canadiens last night. The game, the second of a doubleheader, was played at the Forum, Quebec winning the first match against Victorias 5-0. As a result of the tilt the Redmen take a two point lead over the Royals, instead of the four point margin they hoped to have but they are still undefeated in Senior Group competition.

Red Team Not Consistent

The Red team did not play consistent hockey and they failed to show the form that their previous performances had led us to believe them capable of. The only glimpse of their usual high standard came at the start of the second and third periods when they did most of their scoring. Captain Gordie Crutchfield was the leading point gatherer for the Redmen with a goal and an assist. The others to score for the McGill team were Duff on a pass from Piddock, Crosby on a pass from Ellis and Walker. The Red team found it very difficult to get past the Canadiens defence except in the second period. Tennant handled his goaling assignment as smartly as ever and he had plenty of shots to handle.

Therrier was the scoring star for the Canucks with two goals. The two lines of Therrier, Gagnon and Aubuchon and Neville, Deroches and Martel played a nice back checking game and were largely responsible for the tie. Perras, did not make any great impression in the nets, luck being his greatest factor. The defence of Larochelle and Tapin had plenty of class although the latter looked a little foolish at times when his lunging body checks failed to connect. The game was quite rough with some of the McGill forwards obliged to take plenty of knocks.

First Period

Play had hardly started before Babe Tapin, Canadiens defencemen went to the penalty bench for dumping Piddock, after the latter came close to scoring. With the French team one man short, the line of Crutchfield, Lamb and Crosby took plenty of knocks.

Value Of Classics Debated Tomorrow

New Classical Club Holds
Second Meeting

That famous quotation from Will Durant, "The Classics are dead, and should be buried," will be the topic of a symposium at the second meeting of the reorganized Classical Club in Strathcona Hall at four o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The topic will be introduced by two students in the Freshman Class, following which the meeting will be thrown open to discussion in the usual manner.

Professor McCullagh, president of the Classical Club, announced that a ready welcome would be extended to all students of Latin or Greek and to any others interested. The first meeting of the group, some three weeks ago, witnessed an encouraging attendance of over thirty. It is the hope of the executive that that number may be increased at future meetings to be held at roughly three-week intervals.

Refreshments will be served, for which a nominal charge of ten cents per person will be made.

F-O-U-R S-Q-U-A-R-E

By Icepick

THAT the Red Menace should finally break its winning streak against the tail-enders of the league is not such a bad sign. If they had dropped a game to a higher ranking team, it would have been more of a blow to the team's prestige. But anybody can stand being a game with a team already far behind.

But Canadiens seem to have the right idea about playing McGill, a secret which has so far gone undiscovered. When the score stood high against them, the Canadiens set out on a policy of roughing and body-checking at every opportunity. They let the puck go where it would and went after the man. And the result was that, for the first time this year, the Redmen lost some of their customary calm. They decided that there was no harm in doing a little of the old-time roughing on their own. In consequence, their game suffered. McGill's best policy to date seems to be hard, serious, conscientious hockey with no fooling. But they couldn't play that way against Canadiens last night. As Major Forbes said at one rather depressing point, "You can't win a game in the penalty box".

Things got very hot indeed in the last two-thirds of the game. Paul Piddock came in for the worst of the roughing, probably because he looks like the easiest man to hurt on the team. There must be some mistake, because he took all they had, kept on coming, and gave a good deal back, getting one penalty for himself. We heard him referred to as McGill's best body-checker.

Bert Light, who never misses a game, was as usual wandering through the corridors, his hand raised in permanent greeting. Everybody knows Bert. It seems that there were a pair of what he calls "Ham-and-eggers" behind him in the second period who persisted in making unflattering and personal remarks about the members of the Red team. Bert finally turned around, inquiring in his customary polite fashion just why. When they turned the force of their verbal barrage on the Fighting Jeweler, he put forward an open invitation to settle the matter on the spot. He seemed disappointed that there were no takers.

The crowd was small, probably not touching 4,000. McGill support was not what it might have been in the way of

Graduates Society Hold First Meeting

BEFORE a small gathering the first meeting of the Graduate Students' Association was held last night at Strathcona Hall. The meeting was opened by the president of the Association who welcomed Dr. Johnson, Dean of the Graduate School and Honorary President of the group, and newcomers.

After the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Dr. Johnson was introduced by the president. In his short address, Dr. Johnson welcomed the new graduates of McGill to the Association and expressed that the organization has high possibilities. The Association makes it possible for students to get together and to become acquainted. In concluding Dr. Johnson expressed his gratitude for his election as Honorary President.

An open discussion then followed during which it was decided that Sir Edward Beatty, Chancellor of McGill, Mr. Stanley Ryerson and another prominent speaker chosen by the executive, would address the Association at its three remaining meetings to be held in January, February and March, on topics to be selected.

After the meeting was adjourned, bridge was played by some while an orchestra was in attendance for those who desired to dance. Refreshments were served at 11 o'clock.

The Students' Directory

TODAY the Students' Directory is on sale at all the buildings on the Campus. This year a bigger and more complete directory is presented to the McGill public. This has been made possible through the inclusion of the names of all the students at Macdonald College, which heretofore have not been included. This addition to the directory gives it a wider range and a greater value to the purchaser.

The Directory, for those who are newcomers to the University, is a book containing the name, year, faculty, city address and telephone number and home address of every student registered at McGill. It is invaluable to every student who has anything to do with any of his fellows. It forms a means of ready reference and of obtaining accurate information. No student should be without a copy.

The Directory is the work of the Registrar's office. It is compiled by him and printed by the University at the expense of the Students' Council. Before the Directory, in its present form, was published the list of students was drawn up for the convenience of the University and used in their calendar. This was brought to the attention of the Council a few years ago and it was decided that this information would be invaluable to the students as a whole if it could be made available. Steps were taken and today we enjoy the directory which is bound in the familiar grey of the University publications.

Tuques

HATS and caps play a surprisingly important part in our daily life. True, there is the brawny hero who never wears a hat, even in the depth of winter, and consequently leaves his topper at the Mount Royal after the Junior Prom. We have observed romantic maidens admiring from afar such imperviously insulated men, with the wind blowing freely through their luxuriant locks.

But on the whole, hats are favoured, even by those who still have all their hair. The Dick Tracey-like snap brim which accentuates the prominent fighting jaw is now in fashion among the hennies. The microscopic dinner-plate, with the jutting feather which menaces an escort's eye is all the rage among the monstrous regiment of women.

Which brings us to the subject of tuques. The insignificant bit of felt perched precariously upon piled tresses is no protection to the dainty feminine ear when the celebrated Canadian northwind begins his annual cut-throat competition with the iceman and the Frigidaire. Nor is the Fedora adequate covering even for sturdier masculine auricular appendages. Earmuffs are affected by the effete, but earmuffs are obviously by no means helpful towards producing a Clark Gable profile. They are worn by such persons as "Lilacs" in Harold Teen. No true McGill man will, we are sure, appear in so effeminate, not to say sissified, apparatus.

Ski-caps are warm and becoming, but they should be worn exclusively for skiing. They lend distinction to slacks and pullovers. Look what happened to the beret when it became worn promiscuously. The ten-gallon hat was made too common, and is now a mere half-pint size.

But the tuque is a distinctive Canadian head-gear. It fits the climate, covering ears and forehead. If properly made, it is translucent when pulled down over the face. Though the appearance may be Klu-Klux-Klanish, the result is warmth to nose and cheeks on a freezing day, when one is waiting for a street-car or the girl friend. It is becoming in an unusual manner. It can be worn by both sexes with perfect propriety. It is, in fact, the ideal cap for winter wear. Put on your red and white tuque today!

American Co-operative Movement

CO-OP: A NOVEL OF LIVING TOGETHER. By Upton Sinclair. 426 pp. 1936: Toronto.

"CO-OP" is one of Sinclair's most recent, readable, and convincing sociological novels. Eighty-five characters come to life within its pages, with the appeal of living personalities, not mere symbols. But the book is much more than entrancing fiction. Within its story of struggle and romance is woven one of the sanest solutions of the problems of unemployment offered today. It is the story of the co-operative movement in terms of the men and women within it, and those outside it, but affected by the growth of the movement; of those who are struggling for self-respect, better and more complete life, a saner and more secure society against all the crushing odds of a breaking economic system of those who fight the co-operatives and those who try to help them; of those officials within the recent American giants of bureaucratic effort who unintentionally hurt the co-operatives while trying, with giant hands, to help the politically capitalized "forgotten" man.

The author of this intriguing tale of modern life has many affinities with another genius of the modern American novel, Sinclair Lewis. Upton Sinclair and Sinclair Lewis started their writing careers in the early years of the twentieth century. Both began in the Eastern United States. They have both been affected by the shifting, conflicting social forces and ideologies of our historical period. Both have probed, with the eye and pen of genius, the social cankers, the shame, the rayon-clothed, cellophane-wrapped ruthlessness of industrial and financial power, and the stirrings of the masses. Both have been maligned, both have been acclaimed as sociological novelists. But they are different types. Sinclair Lewis is more the cold analyst of human life in all its passions and possessions and groups. Upton Sinclair is more the philosophic realist who adds a positive vision to the results of analysis. He is an expert in the dissection of society to find out what makes it go; he can lay bare the heart of man; and he is one who beholds the workings of American society in all its complexity and in all its parts. But he doesn't stop with these things, he synthesizes the results with the pulsing current of conviction that there is good in man and possibilities for the social order. Upton Sinclair is the prophet and crusader. As such he is the more admirable and greater genius.

The life of Upton Sinclair, for over thirty years, has been an exciting story of battle with words and actions against unjust privilege, exploitation, graft, financial piracy, and all the host of evils so familiar today. He has been repulsed time and time again, both by the forces he attacks and by the apathy of the people for whom he has fought. He has always risen to fight again. All know of his epic campaign in California and his defeat by an unscrupulous opposition. But do you know that he has written forty-four books and nine plays? That one of his earliest novels, "Jungle," cleaned up the meat packers? That his books probably have a much wider circulation in the Scandinavian countries than they have in our "Love Story" and "Movie Magazine" Canada?

Since "Co-op" is less controversial than some of his previous works, it may have a wider appeal in Canada. The growth of the co-operative movement in our own country will also add to its popularity. As a story, well-told and packed with human interest, it cannot fail to hold attention. In it the American scene from 1932 to 1936 is surveyed from the vantage point of the old warehouse sheltering the Self-Help Exchange of San Sebastian. The thread of the story moves far down in "Pipe City" where transients live in concrete cylinders; weaves through the lives of people on relief but trying to help themselves through the co-op; touches the middle class; and darts far up among the old and new aristocracy of wealth, entering the White House itself via the door opened by feminine influence. It weaves a dark, chaotic and often desperate pattern. But there is plenty of life, laughter and love, while a golden thread of belief in the average person's capacity for kindness and even for reason, under the proper appeal, runs through the darker cloth. It is life today.

Sinclair has not lost his ability to interpret the experiences of the victims and victors of the unplanned mechanism of production in words of crystal-like clarity. His encyclopedic knowledge of the modern age is still intact. His vivid presentation gives the reader an understanding of his social environment while at the same time pointing the way to action that will rid that environment of serious defects.

For those who love fiction, it is good; for those who are not too weak-minded to appreciate vision and purpose, it is excellent. Upton Sinclair has not lost his vision yet. J. M. P.

Social Research Series

"A Graphical Survey of the CANADIAN TEXTILE INDUSTRIES" by J. A. Coote, McGill Social Research Series: No. 4.

THIS little book—little despite its some two hundred and fifty pages—is an innovation in the series of works published by the McGill School of Social Research. Published in paper covers with a print that is reminiscent of the typewritten mimeograph sheet, in order to enable quicker and cheaper publication, this book presents its material in an altogether novel and interesting way.

The book is exactly what its title says it is—a graphical survey of the Canadian textile industries. Compiled by James A. Coote, B.Sc., a member of the McGill staff in the faculty of Engineering, its material is mainly graphical, presented in the form of assorted bar diagrams, line charts, index charts, and histograms. The set-up is neat, logical and clear. On each page we have the material neatly arranged in tabular form—with its sources; then the table is presented in graphical form. As a reference—and source book for people interested in the subject, it will prove most useful, as all its information is available practically at a glance—and this is the avowed intention of its publishers.

To those accustomed to get their economics digested, this book will prove most unpalatable. No conclusions are drawn, no discussions of the material are presented. The information is given, a few explanatory notes as to its composition added, and that is all. There is about one printed page to every ten of tables and graphs. But, now I am getting statistical.

This study of the textile industries covers quite a wide field—origins, regional location, output, employment, wages, capitalization, efficiency, trends of exports and imports, etc. It merits additional attention in view of the fact that the textile industry is a tariff-fostered one . . . and any information about it should prove of value to those interested, both present and future. Of course, as is admitted in an introductory note, the information is by no means new or unavailable at present, but it is in a form that permits it to be readily used. The statistics presented here are carefully chosen and arranged, with due attention to economic fact and technical conditions, enabling one to draw interpretations with a high degree of reliability. The abuse of statistical information is only too common. They have been used to prove anything and everything . . . witness the saying that there are three kinds of liars: liars, damn liars and statisticians.

In one respect, however, this book proves disappointing. We get all the information we want about the textile industries as a whole, but there is nothing about the individual firms which compose it. The 'textile industries' is a mythical thing, but Canadian Cottons, Courtaulds, etc. are tangible things. The 'textile industries' do not pay wages, employ labor, pay dividends . . . but Dominion Textiles does, and in view of the findings of the present Textile Commission and the ones preceding it, information on this subject is of vital importance. But perhaps, such information was not accessible.

Movie Reviews

Capitol Theatre

THREE Men on a Horse" is a tolerably amusing comedy, sprinkled with good lines but devoid of amusing moments, the comedy of the picture being derived from snappy repartee rather than from character or situations. It is the story of a man whose hobby is to pick winning horses in races, and of the consequent complications.

The second picture, "Isle of Fury," is typical of its author, Somerset Maugham, has for its theme a triangle in the tropics. Humphrey Bogart's performance as the husband does not fall below his high standard of acting. Second to Bogart, was E. E. Clive in the part of the old doctor, who, with his philosophical quotations, determined the course of the moral action.

Dear Editor:—

May I through your column express a few of my humble ideas on one or two topics, they are: (a) There seems to be quite a struggle on the part of the Annual Board to have the coming graduates sit for their pictures. This, is too bad as the Board means well and has a lot of hard work ahead of them. However, this is not all the graduate's fault but mostly due to that "hole in his pocket." Surely there could be some arrangement made with the University Authorities to have this amount deducted from the caution money slip. There is always a good balance left and the University are not running much chance. Personally I would have been only too glad to have first crack at the camera but now I know my picture will be a failure as the camera has had to stand such shocks up to date. Down with the rich!

(b) Why is it that we students in the Engineering Building of all places have to be either suffocated or frozen. Could not the radiators be shut off, the lectures held in the hall, the ventilating system revamped and used or the students allowed to sleep at home. That's all we can do in the rooms where we have big classes. I venture to say that if the ventilation system were used money would be saved. (There would be no need for opening the windows as is done—plenty of heat saved). Until conditions are changed we sleep through the lectures and work at home far into the night when the air is fresh.

(c) The Junior Prom is soon to be held. What a Party, and yet I know there are so many who would like to go who cannot. Why can't they? Just because some silly play boy started the idea of rooms, drinks, flowers, etc. It would be so much more fun for all concerned if more of the boys were there (girls too).

It is quite possible for most fellows to get the price of $5.00 for one or two parties a year, but they have heard their bragging seniors say that they spent $20.00 for the party. Such rot, I have gone to a good few of these and never has it cost me more than $1.00 beside the ticket. So take up heart, you students and secure yourself a nice little girl for the occasion.

In closing I might ask those arranging the Prom if it is going to be all intermission or are there going to be lots of dances so a fellow can get around. Irvin Laing's Band is fine in the Auditorium, they are used to playing all the time—don't spoil them. Sure, I'm coming anyway and wait till you see my babe, AN ENGINEER, (would be).

Dollars And Cents Education: It Seems That Liberalism Is Too Expensive For The Boys At Boola-Boola

OFF the beaten path, in the city of DePraven, sat a seat of learning which was noted for two things: one, its great age—two, the bulldog mascot which accompanied its crabbie teams to all its contests. This was Boola-Boola university and according to its own saying, it was constantly building a better mouse-trap than its neighbors.

Now, Boola-Boola had a certain teacher in its employ who was noteworthy among all the others because he had not died at the beginning of his service. To the contrary, this teacher gave promise—yes, he threatened to live on for days and days. All this began to irk the dignitaries who headed the school corporation and administered its funds. For the instructor, whose name was Blunt, had gone amiss in several ways:

One, he had dared to doubt the absoluteness of anything. (This was a particularly irksome offense. Boola-Boola insisted always that its members accept the completeness of nothing and reverse the great god cipher).

Two, he wore sneakers in winter. (Sacrilege, through manipulation of his left rheumatic leg, no less).

Three, he prophesied weather changes. Four, he had once been overheard to say that things could be better.

And so the corporation board withdrew to debate the issue. And when the smoke had cleared, friend Blunt was done a lousy fizzle and dismissed because of "budgetary difficulties." In a special statement, the board defended its action like this:

One, because Blunt has doubted the absolute, he had experimented with the finite and this had been radical and wasteful. At least, if he had been good he would have cost us nothing for what damn fool would dare to measure infinity?

Two, about this sneaker business—one of our nicest officials is a tanner by trade.

Three, the mother of the president of this institution has been forecasting the weather by counting the stars. To employ two weather men is wasteful and inefficient.

Four, because Blunt has insinuated in the presence of witnesses that things could be better, he has endangered the balance of the school budget—for such an insinuation suggests improvement and improvement is costly, democratic, and not at all like Boola-Boola wants it to be.

Five, Blunt is hereby discharged, fired, dismissed, and informed that his services are no longer welcome at Boola-Boola.

And on the bottom of the sheet was a sketch drawn by the president's grandmother depicting a bulldog with its paw to its nose. The caption under it read: "This for you, you nasty radical!"—Wisconsin Daily Cardinal.

RAMBLING at RANDOM

By ECO

DAME rumour has a way of getting about whether clothed in the white cloak of truth or garbed in the black shroud of falsehood. She had her way this year and has sifted into every realm of sport from hockey to tennis.

Probably her most iniquitous day came when she whispered Toronto Varsity had a weakened football team, incapable of matching the veteran Queen's Tricolor, the brilliant Western or the young McGill Redmen.

That WAS her day and for a long time to come she will laugh in the faces of those who believed her. Varsity, far from being the enfeebled squad it was painted, proved the class of the intercollegiate, and today is rated as the only team in the east capable of downing the mighty Sarnia Imperials, champions of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

But Varsity's superiority over teams outside its own league will have to remain untested for at least a year, as wisely, the guiding moguls have decided against advancing into the playoffs.

One cannot think of playdowns without reminiscing on the Queen's-Hamilton set to last year at the close of the season. The broadcast of that game made history in Canadian radio and football. At least half the Hamilton team had a word to say to "maw and paw" while the game was in progress and it was pitiful to hear of the mighty Tricolor, masters of all they surveyed in college circles, being treated as school boys by the Bengals. The score was high enough to discourage intercollegiate teams from going beyond their own circle.

PRESENT rumour has Dr. Bobby Bell retiring at the end of the present season as coach of the senior McGill hockey team. Should such materialize the loss will be a costly one, for no matter who takes his place no one can know the McGill team as well as he does.

Then they say Neil Crutchfield will take his place. If he does it is a pretty good indication the former McGill star is through with hockey as a player, which will be a great loss. He would be an inspiration to any McGill team as coach, but somehow we hope his hockey days are not over, as much as we would like to see him as coach—providing always Dr. Bell retires.

MORE rumour points to a Canadian Rose Bowl game this year, the day after University of Washington meets the best of south's choice. Toronto Argos are mooted as one of the teams, with no selection yet suggested for the other. A Calgary-Sarnia game would appear the most logical choice from this corner, as both teams look like United States squads and know enough about the game as played across the line to give the fans an interesting afternoon. They might make an annual habit of playing Canadian grid finals in the Rose Bowl—it would be a better broadcast, and that's all 99 per cent of Canadians get of the game, and it would be a break to the players who would not have to defrost themselves after it is over. Incidentally it wasn't so long ago McGill was mooted as a candidate for a Rose Bowl game—that is of course for an exhibition tilt.

PLAT Walsh as Queen's hockey coach looks as though the Kingston lads have stolen Varsity's thunder in choosing former athletes for athletic positions. But then Walsh is a former Queen's man, while Warren Stevens and Ace Bailey, Toronto football and hockey coaches respectively, can't lay claim to the Blue as their alma mater.

That McGill-Royals hockey game Dec. 2, looks like a natural. Royals crept up a bit on the Redmen during the past week, but that was only because McGill played two point games. Ottawa appear to be improving and may yet be a factor in the race. They treated Royals in no amateurish fashion last weekend and its more power to the champions for being able to overcome a three goal lead and move ahead to win.

For this week's football game it's Argos over Ottawa by 10 points—but this must not be quoted. The batting average last week was two out of three. A pass!

McGill Fighters Take Part In Central Y. M. C. A. Boxing Card

COACH LIGHT HOLDS BOUTS ON SATURDAY

"Y" Bouts Tonight Feature Fourteen Outstanding Titleholders

BERT LIGHT'S products, Jack Ross and Ed MacLachlan, will be McGill's representatives tonight in the star-studded programme of bouts sponsored by the Central Y.M.C.A. Boxing Club. No less than fourteen men of the twenty-four listed on the card lay claims to a title. All these champions coming together in one evening should produce real fire-works in a fistule way.

Heading the list in the feature bouts is Jack Ross, the Calgary Crasher, and Intercollegiate middleweight champion, who stacks up against Ross Taylor, local Provincial and City titleholder in a five round bout. Taylor represents the Iverley Community Centre. Eddie MacLachlan, another westerner, and Western Intercollegiate champ at 147 lbs. will battle with Clarry Harding, one of the "Y" 's own products and former Novice and Junior Provincial champion, in a three-rounder.

These two men are the only men coach Light has entered in the tournament, the rest of the men will have to be satisfied with trading punches with one another in the regular Saturday afternoon elimination bouts and in the regular practice sessions.

Nickilo-Grathwaite One of the outstanding bouts on the evening's cards brings together Nick Nickilo and Cecil Brathwaite. Nickilo, has the City, Provincial and Dominion championships salted away a couple of years ago, and is on the comeback trail now. Nickilo is the lad who amazed all and sundry when he fought in the British Empire tryouts with a full-grown Balboa beard. His opponent is no set up, and has last year's city title to his credit. The boys weigh in at 147 lbs. and will box for five rounds.

A sluggers battle is the prospect in the Babe McLeod-Joe Coughlin bout. The Babe's most powerful weapon is a roundhouse right or left and Coughlin fights in the same fashion so that one of the two have to connect. McLeod holds the Dominion and International lightweight championships.

Three Round Bouts Three Rounds Bouts.

Female Hockeyists Practice At Arena

Reds Beat Whites By 1-0 In Practice Game

THE second co-ed hockey practice was held yesterday afternoon at the Arena, and in common with most second practices it was most discouraging. The most discouraging part was the scarcity of would-be players. Only eighteen girls showed up and some were girls who had not been out the first time, where are the twenty who were present at the first practice? And where are the other girls who skate? If hockey is not given more enthusiastic support it will go off the campus as have swimming and track.

The first half hour of the practice was spent in a game between the Red second team and the white team, which were captained by Lorayne Strachan and Cary Horner, respectively. The White team was victorious by the narrow margin of 1 to 0, the winning goal being scored by Cary Horner. The remainder of the hour was a general practice for everybody. There is a need for straight skating practice rather than just hockey practice. Despite this weakness, several of the girls are showing up quite well and yesterday Lorayne Strachan and Betty Gould were noticeable for their style.

The next practice is Wednesday, December 1, from 2 to 3, at the Arena. All girls who have turned out to practice to date are asked to come out for this practice, in fact, any girl that can skate is welcomed.

Track Pictures

The team pictures for the Senior, Intermediate and Harrier teams will be taken in the Studios of Strathcona Hall tomorrow, November the 26th. Actual filming will start at about 5.15 giving those with lectures up to 5.00 plenty of time to get down and change into uniform. Will every member of the team please turn out. A team picture is of no use unless everyone is in it. The time and place are absolutely definite and unchangeable. The holding of three championships makes it compulsory to have three complete pictures.

McGill Juniors And Intermediates Seek First Victories Of Season

JUNIOR HOCKEYISTS CLASH WITH ROYALS

Red Seconds Meet Villeray On Saturday Afternoon At Forum

BOTH the Junior and Intermediate hockey representatives of McGill will seek their first win of the season over the weekend. The Juniors cross sticks with the Royals in the Forum at eight o'clock Friday night in the first game of a double-header, that will also bring together Verdun and Les Canadiens. On Saturday afternoon at 2.15, the Intermediates take on Villeray in the final game of a double-header, the first game of which features the L.C.C. Graduates and the University of Montreal.

The Junior squad is in good condition and have greatly improved their stick handling and passing. Their exhibition of high class hockey last week which earned them a tie with a fast Canadiens team installs them as the favorites against a somewhat mediocre Royal team. Bennett's eye injury, the result of a flying puck has completely healed and the boys will take the ice at full strength.

Seconds vs Villeray

The Intermediates meet a formidable opponent in Villeray, who has won one and lost one in two starts this year. The Villeray defensive star is Herbie Westman, a former McGill student known for his football prowess, who is expected to keep the McGill wings busy avoiding his punishing body checks. The Redmen will also have some football men in their lineup.

The following men will see action for McGill Juniors: goal, Cowie; defense: Kerr, Dunn, Brownrigg; forwards: Perowne, McNally, Harvey, Owen, Craig, Bennett, Jacobson, Young and Keefe. Intermediates: goal: Newman, defense: Anton, Loftus, Braden and Norris; forwards: Hall, Doherty, O'Brien, Kerrigan, Kennedy, Cox, Hushion, Calder and Emery.

HOCKEY TICKETS

The Athletic Board have obtained a number of choice seats for the Hockey Classic of the year from the Forum. The game is between McGill and Royals and takes place on Wed. Dec. 2nd. This game promises to be a real sell-out. Hence, come and get your tickets early. A .15 allowance will be granted on the presentation of Student Coupons, upon the purchase of tickets.

Box seats are .75 less .15 per coupon—.60 Promenade seats are .75 less .15 per coupon—.60 Amphitheatre seats are .60 less .15 per coupon—.45 Students are requested to come early as the sale of tickets is already proceeding at a rapid rate.

Senior Basketeers Take On Grads In Exhibition Contest

McGill Cagers Play First Game On Saturday

Van Wagner's Red basketeers take the floor against the Grads this Saturday at the High School, in their first exhibition game of the season. The Grads present one of the most formidable squads in the city. The latest recruits to their ranks are the two American rugby players, John Ferraro and Ole Olson. If their rugby play is any criterion then they should make handy additions to the already large staff of experienced players on the Grads aggregation.

The former McGill squad already have one exhibition tilt under their belts and will present the Redmen with the stiffest sort of opposition. However, the Seniors are not abashed at the prospect of playing last year's provincial champs. They have been practicing under the expert tutelage of coach Van Wagner. The team will rely on speed and ball-handling to carry them through this year, instead of brawn.

The bulk of the Red team will be composed of players with experience on former squads. Among some of these players, who have seen action on last year's team and who have apparently topped a place on this year's edition are Bowes and Hunter, guards; Rutherford, Scrivner and Toahan, forwards. A couple of outsiders have made a distinct impression to get on the team. These men are Shipley, Keyes and Giamasio. Wilkes and Wigdor have made the jump to the Seniors from the Intermediates.

It is only when you realize that this is the creation of a new form of expression springing from the dramatic instincts of a folk people, that the true measure of the accomplishment appears.

With respect to the production, it would be unkind to criticize the technical flaws of the performance. The actors are admitted amateurs with little training and less time. That they managed to deliver their lines with the maximum of intelligibility and a minimum of error is highly creditable. The play, sincere and straightforward, is as much an education for them as for the audience. It must have been difficult to suppress the farcical element in the play. For even the desperate ruse of Mel's wife to shield her husband with the horrible moaning and groaning of birth's travail provoked only roars of laughter in the audience. And then again it is very difficult to resist the comedy of the shepherd pausing in the middle of his Latin oration to correct the case ending.

Considered in the light of its purpose, the play is a success, and its faithful and confident direction have not been in vain.

McGill Hockeyists Draw With Canadiens Last Night

noise, most of it being contributed by a gentleman, whom, we regret, was far gone in drink. His cheering was hearty for the Collegians and showed a total lack of self-consciousness. On the other hand there was, behind the press box, one of Canadiens' prize followers who seemed to want more and more mayhem as the game progressed. He got it, but it was his team which had two men carried off the ice. When Wilson, after having a hole put in his thigh by Rolfe Lamb's skate, was penalized into the bargain, we expected to hear sounds of the splitting of a gut.

Canadiens' Therrier was certainly the white-haired boy for the Flying Frenchmen, scoring half their tallies. He is a smart forward, and took as much punishment as most. He looked as if he was threatening Gordie Melkiejohn after being spilled towards the end, but he might have put any extra breath to better use. Gordie was the reason why McGill tied the game tonight instead of losing. He gave everything he had, and tied up the whole opposing forward line time and again. It looked as if he were hurt himself after he had knocked Desroches out of the game in the final period, smacking the scorer into the goal-mouth.

Rolfe Lamb was lucky to miss one of his most powerful shots last night. Said shot was not at the puck, and was made with the stick head high. Rolfe was apparently annoyed at being smashed into the boards and if he had connected, the results might have been unfortunate. McGill's defense looked weak at times. They don't come any better than Melkiejohn, but he can't cover everybody. Elie made a little too anxious to do battle, often showing little interest in what happens to the puck. The most effective defense of the night was that of the Aces.

The Quebec-Vics tilt showed no great promise for the latter team. The ex-McGill stars don't seem to be improving with their new club. Some people think that they will never hit their old pace. Quebec looked good in the first two periods, but the final frame was pretty feeble.

There were lots of familiar faces around the Forum last night. Major Forbes, of course, was there, surrounded by a small but exclusive bevy. Basketball Coach Van Wagner, on the other hand, was alone in his glory. Shag Shaughnessy senior was around, presumably gathering dope for his broadcast, and incidentally keeping a watchful eye on Shag Junior. Dr. Lamb was a centre of attraction in the corridors.

by made it hot for them. Dave Tennant began to see action with three hard shots in a row and then Perras had to fall to save on a hard shot from Walker.

The puck was being batted too freely around the Red net and Dave had a couple of close calls. A solo rush by Therrier got the first goal for the Canadiens after a nice exhibition of stick handling. This stirred the Red team into action and after a few seconds Paul Pidecock crossed the blue line and passed to Duff who was all alone in front of the net and Alex made no mistake. The period ended with Larochelle getting a penalty for roughing Lamb. McGill 1—Canadiens 1.

The Red team came out on the ice, play started and without wasting any time Gordie Crutchfield scored after Jean Paul Elie had made two shots. The Red team continued to burn up the ice and after a couple of plays Elie rushed down the side and when level with the nets passed out to Crosby who sunk a low one. The Canadiens attacked, silenced till now, began to function and Martel and Desroches kept Tennant hopping.

After a series of end to end rushes, Aubuchon was alone in front of Dave but missed the pass. Half way through the period play began to roughen with both defences beginning to make themselves felt. After a scramble around the nets, Therrier was practically resting on the nets, scored on a pass out from Gagnon. Near the close of the period Wilson went off with a sore knee, after a collision with Lamb, somebody took his place in the penalty box. Score McGill 3—Canadiens 2.

A series of end to end rushes started off the third period in a whirlwind of speed with both teams missing several opportunities. Therrier, rushing down the ice made the mistake of getting too friendly with the Red defence with the result that he ended up in a sitting position. After about three minutes of play the Red team further increased their lead when Walker tallied an assist being credited to Crutchfield. Just after this Paul Pidecock who had taken plenty all night began to hand out a little but he was noticed by the officials with the result that he took a penalty. The French team failed to do anything while he was off but when Lamb went off for slashing they hit their best form of the evening and it was not long before the game was even at 4-4.

Desroches got the first counter, after receiving a pass from Martel and stepping neatly past the Red defence to beat Tennant. While scoring this goal he was checked by Melkiejohn and falling to the ice, was knocked unconscious and had to be carried off. This goal was immediately followed by a solo rush by Gagnon who somehow managed to slip past Melkiejohn and beat Tennant. The final score was 4-4.

While I was eating lunch in the Pit this Tuesday, some lady or gentleman accidentally took my dark tartan scarf instead of their own. Apart from the fact that it was practically my only safeguard against death from pneumonia, I am very fond of that scarf for several sentimental reasons, so if you discover my scarf in your possession, please return it to R. McCallum (H. Yr. Engineering) or leave it with the lady who presides at the cash register in the Pit. Please do not delay in returning it, as I am feeling very cold and lonely without it. Thank you. (For identification, it is green and black with stripes in other colours; i.e., the Malcolm tartan.)
